PROSPECT OF REDUCTION IN THE RATE.
TELEPHONE LINE TO BATHURST.
The enterprise displayed by the present Postmaster-General in connection with our telephone system, and the fact that the Newcastle Line of the Australian Colonies is the best and most extensive telephone service in the British colonies. But there is still room for improvement, and Mr. Cook says he is going to make several shortly which will involve a large expenditure of money. Chief amongst these is the completion of the "metallic" return circuit. The tender of Messrs. H. K. Kingsbury and Co. has been accepted for a new switch-board for the central exchange, exclusive of the cost of the metallic circuit for 4200 subscribers, with a capacity for working up to 6000 subscribers. It will have a capacity for 12,000 lines at £12,000.

major-General, said that if the revenue of £350,000 was obtained, it would be sufficient to enable him to believe that it would increase rather than diminish, and that the Government would be able to pay the amount invested on the line, to say nothing of the convenience afforded to the public. One serious objection which has been raised is that the increase in the rivalry of the telephone lines with the telegraph lines would be a serious loss to the latter to a large sum annually, and the experience of New South Wales, like that of other countries, is that the telegraph business has been seriously injured. Especially is this the case with long-distance lines. The Government have, however, pointed out that they felt somewhat anxious, but, as the result of investigation, they found that the whole of the telegraph business was not affected, and that the telegraph business to Newcastle during the month, which was sufficient to show the effect of the revenue brought in by the telephone lines. Mr. Cook pointed out that the telegraph business was not the telephone line has not led simply to a displacement of the business from the telegraph to the telephone line, but that it has been a serious loss to the public, as the result of the Newcastle experiment that steps are being taken for the purpose of extending the telephone line to Bathurst. Bathurst is not such a big centre as Newcastle, and consequently it is not so serious a loss to the telegraph business as it is to make long-distance telephone line pay its way, but it is a serious loss to the telegraph business. Bathurst which it is expected will in time materially add to the traffic. These are Perth, Lareau, and Lathgow. These places would be connected with

The recent death of General Sir Arthur Herbert, C.B., has caused much interest in the original name of the family was Jones, and just before the change of name application was made to Lord Salisbury, the late prime minister, the late general's family had any objection to the name of Herbert being assumed in place of the name of Jones. Lord Salisbury, however, said that he had no objection to Mr. Jones, of Llanarth, assuming the name, but that if everybody in Wales named Jones compelled to change his name from Herbert to Jones.

SHALL I LIVE IN AUSTRALIA OR ENGLAND?

Most people who have come out to Australia have not much choice in the matter, for, like the widow who arrived in Tasmania with 10 shillings, they have "the money and the day," and which they made a safe use of on their journey. Here and there, however, persons of some means, and with a choice, and, so to speak, the question which heads this article is not without interest.

Fifty or sixty years ago it could readily have been answered, for who would not then have gladly turned his back on the arid wastes, the dusty tracks, the comfortless weatherboard houses, the lack of education, the narrow outlook, the crude materialism, and commercialism of Australia, and with joy returned to the green meadows, the well-kept roads, the stately houses, the cultured manners, the broad life and high culture of England.

To-day, however, the question is not so easily answered. Where was the desert, now a small island of cultivated land covered with flora of a luxuriance unknown in the West North; rough tracks have given place to a network of railways, transport, and well-paved streets. The weatherboard shanty has disappeared from the large cities, and its place has been taken by buildings of a stately and beautiful character. The Australian is no longer a poor, ignorant, and illiterate, but a well-educated, cultured, and refined man, with a high sense of honor, and a high standard of living. The Australian is no longer a poor, ignorant, and illiterate, but a well-educated, cultured, and refined man, with a high sense of honor, and a high standard of living.

The Australian who visits Britain at the present time will be in no way disappointed. He will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe. He will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe. He will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe.

When he wishes to remove the prime which rapidly accumulates on his features and limbs, it will be something of a surprise for him to discover that the Australian is no longer a poor, ignorant, and illiterate, but a well-educated, cultured, and refined man, with a high sense of honor, and a high standard of living.

In the continental department he will certainly obtain more juicy chops, incomparably better beer, and a larger variety of fish, than in Australia. But, on the other hand, he will have to pay 2s. 6d. for a meal, very little superior to one to be obtained in Melbourne or Sydney for 1s. 6d. He will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe.

He will frequently sigh for the fresh green of his own land, but he will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe. He will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe.

He will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe. He will find that the material civilization of England is not so far ahead of his own as he has been led to believe.

"FIRST AID" FOR SEAFARERS.

There seems general agreement nowadays that a knowledge of the "first aid" to be given to the part of the officers and men of our mercantile marine. Happily much has already been done to provide the requisite instruction, but still more remains to be done. By the Merchant Shipping Act of 1894 (says Mr. C. Alan Palmer in the "Nautical Magazine"), every foreign-going ship having 100 persons or upwards on board must have as part of its complement a duly qualified medical practitioner. But the great majority of our vessels do not, as a rule, carry any passengers, and the crews of our largest ships are not so numerous as to make it possible to employ a medical practitioner on board.

It is hardly necessary to cite cases which demonstrate the need of "first aid" on ship-board. One or two may, however, be alluded to. On board a vessel which had arrived from the Mediterranean, a tradesman committed with the Mission to Seamen found a fireman in a dreadful agony as a result of a fall from the deck. The fireman was lying on his back, his head on the deck, and his arms outstretched. He was unable to move, and his face was pale and his eyes closed.

It might truthfully be said of England that its high life is very high, but on the other hand its low life is very low. The Australian is no longer a poor, ignorant, and illiterate, but a well-educated, cultured, and refined man, with a high sense of honor, and a high standard of living.

There is more independence, freedom, and absence of the necessity of maintaining dignity or "putting on airs" in Australia than in England. The Australian is no longer a poor, ignorant, and illiterate, but a well-educated, cultured, and refined man, with a high sense of honor, and a high standard of living.

It must be admitted that difficulties present themselves in the training of a seafaring man. The Australian is no longer a poor, ignorant, and illiterate, but a well-educated, cultured, and refined man, with a high sense of honor, and a high standard of living.

It is not possible to train a seafaring man in the same way as a landman. The Australian is no longer a poor, ignorant, and illiterate, but a well-educated, cultured, and refined man, with a high sense of honor, and a high standard of living.

So far as seamen are concerned, the report is more encouraging. Under the auspices of the Mission to Seamen, 612 seamen have gained the certificate of the Association. A large number have, of course, had to go to sea before finishing the course. At the end of the course, the students were examined, and the results were as follows:

First class, 100; second class, 150; third class, 200; fourth class, 250; fifth class, 300; sixth class, 350; seventh class, 400; eighth class, 450; ninth class, 500; tenth class, 550; eleventh class, 600; twelfth class, 650; thirteenth class, 700; fourteenth class, 750; fifteenth class, 800; sixteenth class, 850; seventeenth class, 900; eighteenth class, 950; nineteenth class, 1000.
